This story, as well as many others equally remarkable as instancing the wonderful intuition of these people, is well vouched for. NEW YORK, February 3.-It is prowho allows his soldiers and his civil servants to starve while he makes a purse for himself, and who encourages in his dominions the worst of atrocities. Of all living emperors, now that Dom Pedro has been retired from the business, the emperor of Austria is the best. He is a decent, well meaning man, whose chief merit is that he has shared power with his subjects, and quieted Hungary by giving it home rule. On the whole, therefore, I think that the most sensible course for those afflicted with an emperor is civilly to conduct him to a ship and order the captain to land him wherever he likes, provided that it be outside of what he was pleased to call his empire.
